Louis Napoleon's Courage.

In September, 1860, I asked Chancery his opinion as to the courage of Louis Napoleon. Chancery replied, "It is great in theory, small in practice. At Strasburg, when the regiments which he depended upon its support, became and are found in a state of abject terror facing under cartridge. In the Bull Run campaign, when he had got half way across the Channel, he became alarmed, and wished to turn back; the people about him called for champagne and kept him to his purpose by making him drink. As he approached, and no friend appeared, his alarm increased. His first troops that met him were under the command of a sensible old officer who, when he saw the strange procession, accompanied by one tame eagle, and was told that Louis Napoleon was at his head, instead of joining him, summoned him to surrender. Vaudreuil had and that at Strasburg Louis Napoleon had not fired even to fire a pistol in his own defense. He realized this, not kept a pistol in his belt, and fired at the officer, but his hand shook so that though the man was not far from him he missed him and wounded a poor cook, who, in his white apron, was standing at a door to see what was going on. Louis Napoleon turned, ran into the rear, and got into a boat. A boat from the shore followed after him. He gave himself up, begged them not to hurt him, and said that he had 2,000 francs in his pocket which he would give them. He was landed, and begged Mr. Adam, the master to take the 100 francs. Adam said he would take care of them, but, with business like habits, chose to count them first. It was lucky for him, for when it was counted in the presence of the crowd there was found to be only 120,000 francs. This sum when he was on his trial before his peers he claimed, and the cruel Government of Louis Philippe let him have them?

"He did not show courage at Magenta?"

"He did not show courage at Magenta?"

He was smoking in a house during the war of 1861 at Rome, where he was two miles in the rear, and did not move or give any order, but he smoked fifty-three cigars. We know this as he always carries with him little boxes, each of which contains fifty cigars. One was quite exhausted, and three had been taken out of the other. Once a spent ball came near him, but that is the only occasion on which he could be considered as under fire. I saw a letter from one of the Confederates to his mother: 'You need be under no anxiety about me. I am with the Emperor, and, therefore, out of danger.' In fact, none of them were hit.—Souvenir's Correspondence

From having been intimate with the proprietors of "Swift's Syphilic Specific," I have known much of its manufacture and uses. There are men in this community who were victims in early life to Syphilis, and who have taken the S. S. S. medicine, and are now, to all appearances and in their own belief, as free from taint of disease as the first man, fresh from the hands of his Maker. Delicacy forbids their public recommendations, but I am allowed to refer the skeptics privately to those who will endorse everything that can be said in its favor. Being professionally much opposed to recommending secret remedies, it is with hesitation I attach my name to this article; but I know whereof I speak when I say our science has not made public a combination equal to "Swift's Syphilic Specific."
